

Green Drinks event hosted by RepRisk

The bimonthly event ‘Green Drinks’ held in Zurich, is aimed at bringing together people interested in the topic of sustainability. Organizer Falko Paetzold initiated Green Drinks in 2010 with the idea that it would be held each time at a different venue. Attendees stem from a wide range of backgrounds and industries, including investment professionals, environmentalists, academics and entrepreneurs, bringing differing perspectives and ideas, and ensuring lively discussions.

On Tuesday evening, RepRisk was proud to host the Green Drinks community at its office, where it had set up several demonstration terminals at which attendees could test its online tool that collects ESG data on thousands of companies and projects. RepRisk also took the opportunity to display a preview of its company reports, which will be offered for online purchase following the launch of its webshop in May.

Early in the evening, Falko gave a welcome address, in which he thanked RepRisk. He explained that his team at Vontobel Private Bank had been using RepRisk data for several years, and that during this time they had witnessed an increase in interest and a greater acceptance of the need to integrate such timely sustainability data within different areas of the bank. RepRisk CEO Philipp Aeby also addressed the crowd of approximately 75 people, focusing on the increasing call for transparency we have witnessed in recent years, and the changing expectations of investors and the public.

RepRisk extends its thanks to everyone who attended and helped create such a dynamic atmosphere. We look forward to the next Green Drinks on May 31, which will be held this time at the Hub.
