

How RepRisk can support your bank's compliance with the Principles for Responsible Banking

October 2019

RepRisk was on the ground in New York City last week during UN General Assembly and Climate Week NYC to celebrate the launch of the UNEP FI Principles for Responsible Banking (PRB). A total of 130 banks from 49 countries, representing more than one third of the global banking sector, signed on to the PRB during a launch event on September 22 and 23.

RepRisk is proud to support the PRB and the shift to a sustainable banking system. For more than 12 years, RepRisk has served as a due diligence tool for a wide range of banking clients – from universal and regional banks, to private and ethical banks, as well as development finance institutions. We have helped our 60+ banking clients systematically integrate ESG risks into their client onboarding and KYC procedures, client and transaction risk assessments, and reputational risk management.

Our clients rely on RepRisk for our systematic approach to identifying and assessing ESG risks that are linked to companies and infrastructure projects around the world. As part of our research methodology, we combine AI and machine learning with human analysis to ensure that our clients have daily-updated and actionable research and metrics available at their fingertips.

If you would like to learn more about how RepRisk can support your bank's implementation and compliance with the Principles for Responsible Banking, in particular Principles #2 (Impact and Target Setting), #3 (Clients and Customers), and #4 (Stakeholders), please reach out to us via contact@reprisk.com.
